"It's generally accepted that family and child-related challenges can shorten or otherwise negatively impact expatriate assignments. FIGT addresses these issues from many perspectives. Even though I've worked with expatriate families with school-age children for a decade, I benefited both professionally and personally from the Families in Global Transition conference. This event and ongoing FIGT network should be part of every IHR and IAS executive's professional development. It would add value to assignees as well."
